Biography

Rory O'Sullivan, Senior Managing Attorney, Housing Justice Project

Rory O'Sullivan is the Senior Managing Attorney at the King County Bar Association's Housing Justice Project. Rory grew up in the Seattle area and attended the University of Washington where he studied Economics and International Studies. After college, he worked as an aid for Congressman Jim McDermott in Washington D.C. Rory received his law degree from Georgetown University Law Center where he worked in the Harrison Housing and Community Development Clinic. Since law school, he has clerked for Judge Edward Shea in the Eastern District of Washington, taught as an adjunct faculty member at Seattle University School of Law, and dedicated his practice to public interest and poverty law. Rory worked as a staff attorney and completed an Equal Justice Works AmeriCorps fellowship at Northwest Justice Project focusing on foreclosure and predatory lending before joining the staff of the King County Bar Association.
