Biographies

EDMUND WITTER is the Managing Attorney for the Housing Justice Project at the King County Bar Association. Previously, he practiced in New York City as a Supervising Attorney at the Legal Aid Society in New York City, where he oversaw its housing unit in the Bronx. Prior to that, he worked at the New York City Corporation Counsel's Office.

KAITLIN HEINEN began her career in intellectual property law, and is now a staff attorney at the Housing Justice Project. Kaitlin is thrilled to work in a field that prioritizes people over profits, that is mission-driven, and that is challenging in nature. She volunteered for HJP soon after graduating from Boston University School of Law in May 2017. Realizing she wanted to do more client-centric and socially impactful work, she joined HJP as a member of staff in July 2019.

YUAN TING is a staff attorney at the King County Bar Association Housing Justice Project. Yuan also spent time as a volunteer attorney with HJP. She has law degrees from East China University of Political Science and Washington University in St. Louis
